

My French Medical Training now offers healthcare professionals high-quality continuous training opportunities both online and on-site

Paris, France, April 4, 2022— French Healthcare Association, a network of over 250 leading French healthcare players, and INVIVOX, an expert in medical knowledge sharing, launched My French Medical Training, a global platform dedicated to continuing professional development in health. It facilitates the exchange between French experts and healthcare professionals from all over the world, offering both online and on-site high-quality training opportunities.

The need for care providers and executives to expand their professional competencies and stay abreast of the latest medical developments has never been greater. With the new breakthroughs in medical research and the continuous technological advancements, healthcare workers need to be aware of the latest developments to implement them in their practice.

France has a long tradition of innovation and excellence in the field of healthcare, being a global hub for the sharing of medical knowledge. It offers high-level training and cutting-edge research across all specialties.

My French Medical Training helps to fill an industry need, ensuring healthcare professionals can expand their knowledge and skills, and regularly keep up with new medical practices and technologies, to deliver the highest quality of care. The platform brings together training offers from leading players such as cancer centers, hospitals, universities, research centers, laboratories, and medical training centers.

The vast variety of content formats (master class, webinars, replay, mentoring; live or asynchronous; online or in-person) provides a more collaborative and efficient way to share medical knowledge. It gives the opportunity to HCPs access content easily, without time or location restrictions.

“The promotion of French expertise in health, in its broadest sense, is how the French Healthcare Association exemplifies French excellence in health. The launch of myfrenchmedicaltraining.com is a new step in the concrete implementation of this vision. A website that will federate a community,”
Jean-François Gendron, President of the association.

“Via My French Medical Training, our platform is accessible free of charge for healthcare professionals around the world, regardless of their discipline. This is a unique positioning in France and rare at the European level”, adds Julien Delpech, founder of Invivox.

About French Healthcare Association

Founded in January 2018, the association brings together French companies, healthcare establishments, research and training institutes who wish to actively participate in a collective dynamic and together promote their activities internationally. Its members, from start-ups to large groups, reflect the diversity of the French healthcare ecosystem: public and private healthcare establishments, construction companies, architecture, hospital engineering, pharmaceutical industry, biotechnology, medical devices, manufacturers of medical technologies, medical equipment, players in digital health, etc. French Healthcare Association helps its members to enrich their network, access new opportunities and promote French expertise in healthcare internationally.

About Invivox

Founded in 2017 to facilitate medical peer-to-peer mentoring, the start-up Invivox has developed a platform to connect doctors from all over the world, providing training adapted to their needs, remotely or face-to-face, in innovative formats.
